WHAT’S NEW ON NETFLIX

“The Devil All the Time” (2020)

British actor Tom Holland takes a step away from the playful role of Spider-Man that many have come to know (and love) him for as he stars as Arvin Russell in this gothic drama premiering Wednesday, Sept. 16, on Netflix. Based on the epic novel of the same name by Donald Ray Pollock, the film follows Arvin, who was brought up in the backwoods, Bible-thumping town of Knockemstiff, Ohio, after his father died during World War II. Raised by Willard Russell (Bill Skarsgard, “It,” 2017), a veteran who uses prayer to cope with his own PTSD from the war and his wife’s cancer diagnosis, Arvin now also has a deep faith, but he is coming to realize that his town may not be as God-fearing as he once believed. When he is given his father’s gun as a birthday gift, Arvin begins to take matters into his own hands and faces down the town’s corrupt sheriff, Lee Bodecker (Sebastian Stan, “Avengers: Endgame,” 2019), as well as villainous couple Sandy (Riley Keough, “Logan Lucky,” 2017) and Carl Henderson (Jason Clarke, “Pet Sematary,” 2019), and the unholy town preacher, Rev. Preston Teagardin (Robert Pattinson, “The Lighthouse,” 2019).

WHAT’S NEW ON DISNEY+

In 19th-century France, the Grand Dame (Jeanne Moreau, “Face,” 2009) sets the record straight about “Cinderella,” telling the story of servant girl Danielle de Barbarac (Drew Barrymore, “Santa Clarita Diet”) in this version of the classic tale coming to Disney+ on Friday, Sept. 18. When Danielle was 8 years old, she was left in the care of her new step-mother, the Baroness Rodmilla de Ghent (Anjelica Huston, “The Adams Family,” 1991), after the tragic death of the girl’s father. Now, 10 years later, Danielle is treated more like a servant by her stepmother and two stepisters, Marguerite (Megan Dodds, “CSI: NY”) and Jacqueline (Melanie Lynskey, “Mrs. America”), who have burned through her father’s money but refuse to acknowledge their debt. When Danielle has a chance encounter with the crowned prince, Henry (Dougrey Scott, “Batwoman”), he quickly becomes besotted with her, despite the king and queen wanting him to marry the princess of Spain. Not wanting her step-family to know about their meeting, or for him to know that she’s a servant, Danielle tells Henry that she is the Comtesse Nicole de Lancret. Danielle continues to see Henry, keeping her true identity secret from him and hiding her activities from her step-family.

Cooking low and slow outdoors is a timeless technique associated with many cultures worldwide, but American barbecue has elevated it to an art form. (And “low and slow” is key; otherwise, you’re just grilling.)

It is, however, one of the few food topics that can get people all fired up, and that’s largely due to some major regional differences in terms of ingredients and techniques. People have some strong opinions about it all. But we’re all united by our appreciation for the pitmasters who have mastered the technique and are consistently serving up great barbecue, whether it’s in their backyard or on the barbecue circuit.

We’re also fond of throwing them all together to watch them compete — how else can we determine the best if we can’t agree on one form? Over the past decade, we’ve seen a spate of barbecue-themed TV series that have hooked viewers in different ways — from TLC’s docu-reality series “BBQ Pitmasters,” to the familiar competition format of Food Network shows “Great American BBQ Showdown,” to the familiar competition format of Food Network shows “Great American BBQ Showdown.”

Netflix has entered the game with its newest offering, “American Barbecue Showdown,” which launches this week (Sept. 18). It’s an eight-part competition series that pits some of the best backyard smokers and pitmasters against each other in a “fierce but friendly faceoff.”

That “fierce but friendly” bit might have you wondering if the competition will have a Bobby Flay level of intensity or the more laid-back charm of “Nailed It!” (but without all the humorous fails). It falls somewhere in the middle. In each episode, the contestants’ barbecue skills will be put to the test in different challenges ranging from unique meats to traditional techniques.

They’re all vying for the title of American Barbecue Champion, but they’ll have to impress the judges, and the two regular judges have some impressive credentials. No stranger to titles herself, Melissa Cookston is the owner of Memphis BBQ Company and the “winningest” woman in barbecue — she’s a seven-time world champion and was inducted in the American Royal Barbecue Hall of Fame. Cookston is joined at the judges table by Kevin Bludso, founder of Bludso’s BBQ, one of the best barbecue joints in Los Angeles.

“A.P. Bio” actress Lyric Lewis and “Floor Is Lava” host/narrator Rutledge Wood are the hosts of “American Barbecue Showdown.” They’ll help keep things light and entertaining through all eight episodes, which drop Friday, Sept. 18, on Netflix.

It’s complicated: New season of ‘The Bachelorette’ to feature unique twists

By Michelle Rose
TV Media

It’s complicated: So. Much. ... you want, right here in your local newspaper.

That’s the character played by Tim Allen (“Last Man Standing”) in the 1990s sitcom “Home Improvement,” which ran for eight seasons on ABC. The series featured a show-within-a-show, “Tool Time,” which was hosted by Allen’s character and Al Borland, played by Richard Karn (Hulu’s “PEN15”).

It’s been over 20 years since the series wrapped, but nostalgia is running high because Allen is still fielding questions about a possible reboot. It’s all just talk at this point — after all, Allen is busy with “Last Man Standing,” which has been renewed for a ninth season.

But fans, take heart: History has greenlit a new TV project that might be the next best thing to a “Home Improvement” revival.

Allen is set to re-team with Karn in “Assembly Required” (working title), an unscripted building series that celebrates the can-do spirit. In each of the 10 episodes, Allen and Karn will step into the workshop of one of the country’s top builders to watch them renew household items that need some serious fixing.

“We’re living in a throwaway society,” Allen said. “We buy, break, replace ... rinse and repeat. Whatever happened to repair and rebuild?

There are some people who unfriend, unfollow and dispose of anything that offends, annoys or breaks, so I’ve created a show to remind people of the satisfaction and pride that comes from rebuilding something on their own. And who better to join me than my buddy from the old ‘Tool Time’ days: Richard Karn.”

It’s on: Hollywood is champing at the bit to bring you a dramatized retelling of “Tiger King: Murder, Mayhem and Madness,” which was a huge hit for Netflix earlier this year.

There are currently two high-profile adaptations in the works, but in this race to big ratings numbers, NBC and Kate McKinnon (“Saturday Night Live”) might have the edge.

McKinnon’s project, “Joe Exotic” (working title), recently received a straight-to-series order from NBC Universal. It’s not your typical series order, either — it’s a cross-platform order, which means “Joe Exotic” will air on NBC (broadcast), USA (cable) and Peacock (streaming).

It’s worth noting that “Joe Exotic” was pitched last fall, before the pandemic, filled in for Harrison, who was able to film the final episodes of an already memorable season.

It’s ‘Tool Time’: History (the channel) seems to be in a “rebuild” mode, and executives have called in Tim “The Tool Man” Taylor to help them out.
THE CONNECTION WITH NEWSPAPER MEDIA
