TV Media

From Canada to the United States to the U.K., there is no denying that TV fans love a good bit of crime. Whether it comes in the form of a true crime documentary, a laugh-out-loud heist comedy or, as is the case with the Scottish series “Guilt,” a darkly comedic thriller, nothing gets the blood flowing like murder on the small screen.

Coming back to PBS Sunday, Aug. 28, for its second season, “Guilt” ups the ante and prepares to deliver even more deliciously dark and depraved dealings following the first season’s hit-and-run accident.

For those who haven’t yet indulged in the thriller comedy (Season 1 spoilers ahead), “Guilt” follows two wildly different brothers, Jake (Jamie Sives, “Valhalla Raising,” 2009) and Max McCall (Mark Bonnar, “Catastrophe”), who, upon returning one night from a wedding, hit and kill an old man on the road home. Despite at first hoping that they only wounded the man, Jake and Max soon decide they are in over their heads and they flee the scene of the crime. Of course, the man’s death shows up in the local newspaper the following day.

Instantly plagued with guilt, any hope the men had of moving forward with a “normal” life came crashing down with the arrival of a young American woman named Angie (Ruth Bradley, “Flyboys,” 2006), who claims to be a niece of Walter’s.

By the end of the show’s premiere season, Alex and Jake begin to question just how involved Sheila really was in the circumstances surrounding Walter’s death that night and the secret comes out, leading to Max’s arrest for manslaughter.

Now, as Season 2 begins on PBS (it aired October 2021 on BBC in the U.K.), another four episodes are dedicated to the McCallans and their con- nection to a mysterious set of events. Beginning as shots ring out in an Edinburgh cell, viewers soon learn Max is being released from prison on the other side of the city.

Returning alongside Max (and later, Jake) for Season 2 are characters Kenny Burns (Emun Elliott, “Star Wars: Episode VII - The Force Awakens,” 2015), the private eye hired to investigate Walter’s death in Season 1, and DC Stevie Malone (Henry Petigrew, “The Danish Girl,” 2015) of the Edinburgh police department.

Joining the show for the first time, meanwhile, is Erin (Sara Vickers, “Watchmen”), a young woman struggling to come to terms with her troubled family life; Erin’s father, Roy (Stuart Bowman, “Versailles”), a criminal kingpin with many shady projects; Erin’s mother, Maggie (Phyllis Logan, “Downton Abbey”), who has also been greatly affected by Roy’s wrongdoings; and Yvonne (Rochelle Neil, “The Nevers”), a streetwise police detective Kenney meets while attending an Alcoholics Anonymous meeting. Ian Pirie (“The Last Duel,” 2021) also stars as San- dy.

WHAT'S NEW ON HULU

“The Patient”
Preparé yourself to deal with the past when the new FX thriller “The Patient” premieres Tuesday, Aug. 30, on Hulu. Starring Steve Carell (“The Office”) as therapist Alan Strauss, this 10-episode miniseries follows the widowed doctor as he is held captive by his patient, Sam Fortner (played by Domhnall Gleeson, “Star Wars: Episode VII - The Force Awakens,” 2015). Sam, who reveals himself to be a serial killer, comes to Alan with the most unjust demand of his career: help him curb his homicidal urges. As Alan attempts to unravel Sam’s disturbed mind and stop him from killing again, he grapples with Sam’s refusal to address some critical topics while dealing with his own repressed troubles. Throughout the course of the series, Alan learns not only how deeply disturbed his patient is, but how much work he needs to do in his own life. From FX Productions, the series is executive produced by Carell, Caroline Moore (“Cedar Cove”), Victor Huo (“Trans-parent”) and Joseph Weisberg, Chris Long and Joel Fields of “The Americans.” Written by Fields and Weisberg, “The Patient” also stars David Alan Grier (“Joe Pickett”), Linda Emond (“The Lodge“), Laura Niemi (“This Is Us“), Alex Rich (“Genius“), Amy Handelman (“Friend Zone: The Series“) and Andrew Leeds (“Zoe’s Extraordinary Playlist“).

As Cheryl, the woman in question, works back through her own personal journey, reconnects with classmates and seeks out others who have similar trauma, she discovers just how widespread this problem seems to be. Directed by Amy Berg (“Phoenix Rising”), Jenna Rosher (“Dear…”) and Kristi Jacobson (“Solitary,” 2016), “Keep This Between Us” is executive produced by Berg, “Retro Tech’s” Chad Mumm, Mark W. Olsen and Dana J. Olkkonen, Thalia Mavros (“The Principles of Pleasure”), Cheryl Nichols (“Doula,” 2022), Ari Basile (“Entrepreneurs”) and Sarah Gibson (“Britney vs Spears,” 2021).

David may be the first to have been uploaded, but he won’t be the last, as a global conspiracy begins to unfold. Focusing on family and speculating on the limits of technology, “Pantheon” challenges what it means to be human (per AMC). ‘Everybody Still Hates Chris’ gets the greenlight

By Michelle Rose
TV Media

Getting animated: Chris Rock’s “Everybody Hates Chris” is getting an animated treatment. The showrunner Cathy Schulman, director Susanne Bier, and their fellow executive producers, are breathing new life into the hit sitcom with this innovative new format. This also marks another significant in-house collaboration for CBS with Chris McCarthy and our valued partners at MTV Entertainment Studios as we jointly support this marquee series.

Rock, the original series’ creator, will return as the narrator and as an executive producer alongside showrunner Sanjay Shah (“Central Park”). The unique stories of three remarkable leaders will be inspired by Rock’s own experiences growing up in Bedford-Stuyvesant, Brooklyn, during the 1980s. A premiere date has not yet been announced.

One-term ‘First Lady’: Just like politics, TV can be a cruel game. Showtime has announced it is not renewing “The First Lady” for a second season. In a Deadline exclusive, a network spokesperson stated: “Showtime can confirm that the anthology series ‘The First Lady’ will not be moving forward with another season. We would like to applaud the artistry and commitment of our showrunner Cathy Schulman, director Susanne Bier, and their fellow executive producers.”

While former cast members — most notably Tyler James Williams (“Dear White People,” 2014), who played the titular character — have previously teased a reunion show, this cartoon reboot has been quietly in the works since (at least) early 2021, when CBS Studios reportedly placed the project in development.

“A reimagining of this groundbreaking, critically acclaimed series has been a source of creative discussions at our studio for a long time,” George Cheeks, president and CEO of CBS Entertainment, said. “It’s exciting to join forces with 3 Arts and the creative genius of Chris Rock as he expands on his vision of the original show in this innovative new format. This also marks another significant in-house collaboration for CBS with Chris McCarthy and our valued partners at MTV Entertainment Studios as we jointly support this marquee series for Paramount+ and Comedy Central.”

The inaugural season, which focused on U.S. first ladies Eleanor Roosevelt (Gillian Anderson, “The X-Files”), Betty Ford (Michelle Pfieffer, “One Fine Day,” 1996) and Michelle Obama (Viola Davis, “How to Get Away With Murder”), had critics and fans buzzing, but not necessarily in a good way. Many critics — including The New Yorker, which referred to it as a “bad-wig costume drama” (ouch) — took issue with the series’ narrative structure and its preoccupation with drawing parallels between the three historical figures, rather than fleshing out their individual stories.

In the end, the less-than-warm reception, coupled with high production costs, cut “The First Lady’s” run short despite producers’ hopes that they’d have more time to explore the experiences of others who have occupied the East Wing of the White House.

During a Television Critics Association presentation back in February, executive producers Schulman and Bier were already thinking of future installments, prompting Anderson to comment, “I think the hope is that there’s going to be future seasons so they’ll have the opportunity to more first ladies represented. So, maybe not just four but maybe 104.”

Alas, it was not meant to be.

Back to AMC: After starring in “Jessica Jones” and HBO’s upcoming “Love and Death,” actress Kristen Ritter will be returning to AMC. Ritter, who had a recurring role as Jesse’s (Aaron Paul, “Westworld”) girlfriend in AMC’s “Breaking Bad,” has signed on to star in and executive produce the cable channel’s follow-up to “Orphan Black.”

Greenlit as a 10-episode series, “Orphan Black: Echoes” is set in the same world as the parent series but in a different time. Here is how AMC described the series back in April when it was first confirmed: “Set in the near future, the new ‘Orphan Black’ takes a deep dive into the exploration of the scientific manipulation of human existence. It follows a group of women as they weave their way into each other’s lives and embark on a thrilling journey, unraveling the mystery of their identity and uncovering a wrenching story of love and betrayal.”

Ritter will star as Lucy, “a woman with an unimaginable origin story, trying to find her place in the world” (per AMC).

The original “Orphan Black” series, which earned Canadian actress Tatiana Maslany (“She-Hulk: Attorney at Law”) an Emmy for Best Actress, ended its run in 2017, and there’s been talk of a possible spinoff since 2019. Fan interest also led to the “Orphan Black: The Next Chapter” podcast, launched in 2021 as a continuation of the story in audio form.

No word yet on whether Maslany or any other original cast members will be joining “Orphan Black: Echoes,” which will debut in 2023, but co-creator John Fawcett (“Ginger Snaps,” 2000) returns as a director and executive producer.

“Echoes” creator Anna Fishko serves as writer and showrunner.
